Palais Festetics

Palais Festetics was built in 1858 in the New Viennese Renaissance style by the architect duo Johann Julius Romano and August Schwendenwein for Countess Eugénie Festetics of Tolna.

In 1875, the Austrian Trade Museum was established in the palace and in 1919 it became the University of World Trade, today's University of Economics. In 1937, the Palais came into the possession of the Chamber of Commerce.

Between 1958 and 1961, it was restored and converted for office purposes and used by the Chamber of Commerce until 2019.
